HIS COLT DON DE ORO RAN POORLY.

ENPLACED IN THE GREAT TRIAL STAKES FEW

erhaps August Belmont himself was the Masco tomains of Queen Victoria his colors have not been English Derby in 1897. When the steamship on which Mr. Belmont is voyaging reaches her dock in England, a cable dispatch will be handed to Mr. lmont which will contain melancholy news. It was a disconsolate and despairing downfall that and dismal and deleful that nobody could discover any excuse or explanation. It is true that a grea the strongest race glasses, and nothing that could for Den De Oro's hopeless failure to make himself formidable in any part of the contest. It was not a with rejoicing. But the layers-of-odds and their children and their grandchildren and their descendants to the remotest generation will recount with exultation the story of the marvellous triumph of the professional speculators over the amateur seek are after profit, which took place on the battle the Sheepshead Bay track, when Winged Foot won the Great Trial of 1896, with Ornament econd and The Friar third. The Belmont entries are backed with inexhaustible courage and prodigious amounts. But neither Don De Oro nor Octaeded in obtaining even as much as third polace. It was a remarkably fast race, and the time made, 1:101-5, compares well with the best previous performances over the Futurity course. Winged Foot, an outsider in the betting, ridden by her owner, John J. McCafferty, captured first honors with startling case. The Western colt Ornament, idden by Garrison, ran creditably, and secured secand place. Captain Alfred S. Post, the starting whose work was excellent and admirable, reported to the stewards that Garrison had done fair and prompt start, and Garrison was called into the stewards' stand and praised for what he Frederick Taral, first of American jockeys, who rode Scottish Chieftain in the Great Trial Stakes, said after the race that Scottish Chieftain was outd, and that the others in the contest outran him. The start, he added, was wholly satisfactory, and nothing could be said in the way of apology for Scottish Chieftain simply did not have was an enthusiastic admirer of Ornament, and advised Marthew Byrnes to suggest to Marcus Daly to buy the Western colt, even if it should be necessary to pay a big price in order to get him. He said further that he thought both Don De Oro and George Kessier, ware hadin totaled and interest. George Kessler were badly jostled and interfered with before they reached the homestretch. Nevertheless, he could not understand why Don De Oro did not exhibit greater speed.

A PUZZLE OF THE TURF.

e as it may seem, Don De Oro was neve one of the puzzles and mysteries of the turf that a colt which had shown high form at Morris Park and in the Tremont Stakes at Gravesend should run so miserably in the Great Trial. When such painful puzzles and mysteries occur on the turf, is it odd that hosts of intellig cans prefer to go wheeling rather than to go racing? Horses are far less trustworthy than bleycles and far more uncertain.

Byron McCleffand and John J. McCafferty are wonders in their way. Nobody would suspect that they were genuine geniuses, but the two men are amazingly successful in buying with moderate outamazing successful in buying with motivate lay colts and fillies that capture many rich turf prizes. Each of them has been shrewd enough to secure racers capable of catching big stakes year after year. Winged Foot conceded weight to every one of her competitors except Don De Oro, Orna-ment and George Kessler, but she won with be-

But it was an extremely expensive afternoon nearly all of the visitors to the course except the layers of odds. The Great Trial fell to an unpopular animal from an unpopular stable, and no wild enthusiasm was displayed over the second place rained by the Western colt Ornament, or the third ed by The Friar. If Mr. Belmont's Don De Gro had proved to be all that fond fancy had painted him, and had carried off the victory in im-pressive style, the cheering and rejoicing would

But the Great Trial was by no means the only race which deeply disappointed the great majority the spectators. The first race was taken by an werlooked and unpopular outsider, while the riding of Clayton on Distinction, from the Brook-dale Stable—a well-backed and much-admired filly was by no means equal to Frederick Archer's necess thought that if Distinction had been ridden with especial ability and especial energy from the first stride to the last she might perhaps have been the leader at the end, instead of coming in

In the second race Sue Kittie, another outsider, was easily successful, very easily. The favorite, Str Dixon, ran second. Jefferson, who carried the es and the money of many people, ran out on hopes and the money of many people, ran out on the backstretch, and was never near the front afterward.

HIS HLI-LUCK PROVERBIAL.

James Galway is one of the most popular of American turfmen, but his fill-luck is proverbial. Many experts of long experience made up their minds that Mr. Galway's Beimar would win the fourth race, and his filly Brilliancy would be first in the axit race. But they were woully mastaken. Neither Beimar nor Brilliancy was near even third place at any time in their contests. Both ran with about as much vivacity and desh as a block of asphalt pavement usually exhibits in freezing weather. It is astonishing that Mr. Galway remains on the turf, since that all the same and an about the most content and the mastaken and the same and the same and the mastaken and the same and the s

Although August Belmont is on the deep blue sea. the Sheepshead Bay racetrack bet heavily on Don De Oro and Octagon, who were coupled in the betting, to win the Great Triel Stakes. It is not generally known that July 4 is the birthday of J. J. McCafferty. But when the shrewd John, arrayed in the Stars and Stripes, appeared on Wingel Foot, and won the Great Trial with ease, patriotism was forgotten by the betters, who fervently wished that John J. McCafferty existed in the days of Patrick ries and the Britons. People who anticipated a delightful evening at Manhattan Reach were comiled to make excuses and return to the city on syndicate of bicycle manufacturers talked seriously Club for the purpose of giving bicycle races next tended to enter Class B of the bloycle army, he turned ghastly pule and fled from the grounds terror-stricken at the horrid thought.

There are stewards at the Sheepshead Bay track, entries of the owner of Paladin are to be refused in the future, and the running of several other notorious "in-and-outers" is under investigation. The music was a redeeming feature of the day's to the surprises that were sprung on t hearted, and was willing to take things easily. In the mean time McCafferty, on Winged Foot, called upon her, and she simply smothered Ornament, who gamely responded to Garrison's urging. Winged Foot won by nearly a length, in the fastest time ever made for the stakes, with McCafferty patting her neck with his left hand, and smiling cheerfully at Garrison, who was second with Ornament, a length in front of The Friar, who was third. Octagon was fourth, and the field was beaten off. After the race, John J. Hyland, who was confident that Don De Oro would win, was crestfallen over the result. He was greatly disappointed over the showing made by Don De Oro. Griffin said that he was crowded shortly after the start.

McCafferty said: "I got off well, but took Winged Poot in hand when I had secored a good position and waited with her. I raced up or position at the bend, so as not to get cut off, and when I called upon her for the Juish she came a ay and won easily."

upon her for the 2nish she came a ay and won easily."

Garrison, who rode a splendid race, described Ornament's struggle as follows: "It was a grand start. I was a trifle behind, but in motion, with Ornament in his stride. He was a contender throughout the race, as he was forced to keep his position. At the bend I made play with him and soon had The Friar in trouble, but when McCafferty came up with Winged Foot it was all over, as he had something to spare. He changed hands, so as to pat his filly on the neck as he passed the findsh. Ornament is a good colt, but when a record is made as easily as Winged Foot made it to-day it is certain that there are some good two-year-olds in training, even if it is an "in-and-out" year."

McCafferty is $17,000 richer by the victory of Winged Foot.

St. Maxim won the Sheenshead Bay Handicap, at a mile, easily, in 1:0-1-5. Gotham was second, and Hanweil third. James Galway's Belmar, who was the favorite for the race, finished last.

Irish Reel, who was the only favorite to win, gladdened the hearts of the plungers by winning the fifth race, with the odds of 10 to 7 on her chances, by a comfortable marwin from Ed Kearney. The first heat indicated that Jube possessed a trifla more speed than the younger horse, but his rival was r more level-headed, and in the end this won the race. While Billy Mack put his head down at the perior speed failed to carry him to the front in any part of the race. The fast time made by the winner was quite a surprise to the horsemen present, as well as to the driver of Jube, few of the experts well as to the driver of Jube, few of the experts accounting him equal to a mile below 2:25 on the half-mile course.

Another match race for $300 was decided between the pacers Junebug, 2:10%, and Newsboy, 2:12%, the latter winning handily in straight heats, owing largely to the losing breaks of the horse with the faster record. Junebug, like Jube, did not take kindly to the sharp turns at Parkway, and he made a series of breaks which cost him all chance of winning the mace. It is said that a return match between the pacers will probably take place in the near future at Fleetwood Park or some other mile track. Summeries:

MENT. Ardsley Casino, Ardsley-on-the-Hudeon, attracted a greater assemblage of spectators to the links than has been seen there since Memorial Day, when the casino and grounds were opened. The players were on the course nearly all day, although a few did not finish their rounds until late in the after-medal play, for a pretty silver loving-cup, given b John D. Archbold. This was won by George F Mairs, one of the most regular players at the club, with a score of 115-30-85. The first half of Mr. Mairs's game, made in 53, was far the better. He is as yet an inexperienced player, but is improving rapidly. W. J. Worcester made the best gross score, 105. His second round of 52 was the lowest He did the fourth hole in three, clearing the chasm hole in three strokes. P. G. Thebaud and Benjamin Prince were obliged to play from scratch, not yet having handed in enough cards to receive a handicap.

Among those at the casino were John D. Archbold, the giver of the cup, who came down from Tarrytown in his steam launch; Henry Villard and his family, Mrs. J. Allen Townsend, L. H. Allien, J. Warren Bird, General Samuel Thomas, Miss Thomas, E. R. Thomas, H. M.
